FROM "THE TIMES" OF EAST
TO-DAY.
(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)
THE IRISH PROPOSALS.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, is expected to make a general statement on the Irish proposals of the Government in the House of Commons this afternoon. The present intention is that there shall be no debate. It is felt that any criticisms and suggestions that members may have to offer can better be made on the introduction of the bill, which will follow in a few days' time. Mr. Asquith's speech is a special case, and will be treated differently. The bill, with its unusual features, and the "whips" have been issued, except all the "Nationalists" who lingered in Ireland, a much larger attendance of members is expected than has been seen at St. Stephen's for many years.

works. Mr. O'Connell, however, is dropping out of the running for a Parliament in Dublin, and to exclude any Ulster counties from its operation are well known. What Parliament and the country will be specially interested to hear from the Prime Minister is the nature of the general safeguards which the Cabinet have added to the scheme which was accepted by the Ulstermen and the Nationalists to meet the wishes of the Unionist members of the Cabinet. These safeguards, it is understood, relate to the maintenance of British military interests and to the protection of the Unionist minority in the South and West.

END OF A MYSTERY.

The publicity of Parliament, says The Times, should, at least, put a stop to the theory, which we believe to be quite unfounded, that the Irish leaders have only come to an agreement through receiving different versions of the new scheme of government. That theory was never very plausible so long as these leaders themselves were so completely in the dark. A very brief discussion should have satisfied our nervousness about military and naval "safeguards," which are the only practical matters left in dispute. We saw the only practical matters, because the bulk of the agitation against any attempt at settlement has taken the form of a demand for the transfer of the Home Rule in any shape or at any time. Every Unionist would have said the same as long as there was the remotest chance of preventing the passage of the Home Rule Act, which most of us still regard as an utterly inhumane and undesirable measure. But even Lord Selborne, who has had a long and honourable connection with the Unionist cause, has specifically rejected any notion of upsetting the fact accompli, so that the whole controversy

The news, says The Times, of the crushing of the attack of the Prussian Guard near Contalmaison has given great satisfaction. It reveals at once the measure of the enemy's anxiety and of the staunchness of our new armies. South of the Somme the situation is quiet and in the north the German position is unaltered.

We distrust the south of Korea, and we distrust the enemy. Last night enemy infantry in the region south-west of the smoldering, and large, lumbering This morning section of the villages. Say and the captured ma-

CHANGES.

The Times Parliamentary Correspondent writes:—The Prime Minister is reconstructing the Government with more ingenuity than originality; it is still a case of ringing the changes in a small familiar circle of politicians. Mr. Tennant enters the Cabinet as Secretary for Scotland, though it is only the mysteries of our system of Government why the holder of this dull but blameless office should necessarily be a member of a War Cabinet. After being for two years the most questioned member of the least questioned. Mr. Tennant being comfortably settled in Mr. McKinnon Wood's place, the latter takes refuge at the Treasury. He has been Financial Secretary before, but the war has made the office so important that it was. Mr. Wood will remain in the Cabinet.

In the majority of the Belfast churches to-day references were made to the heroic part played by the Lister division in the battle of the Somme. The Lister division was heavily, and mourning throughout the province, but the sorrow of the people is softened by the many tributes to the gallant dead.

In a message to Balmahamilton, the Press, Dr. Day, of the Lister congregation at the North Down Congregational Church, said:
